COCHISE MAY BE BADLY SPLIT UP

Plans Are Proposed to Make Three Counties of It.

Tombstone, Ariz., March 15.—According to present indications it is going to take considerable manipulation to keep the present boundary line of "Dear old Cochise" intact during the coming session of the legislature. Already there have been drawn up no less than three or four plans for the dividing of the county, as well as a bill which provides for the amending of the law so that the county seat can be removed. What Cochise will look like after the legislature adjourns remains to be seen.

It has been known for some time that a map of the county has been segregated so that Cochise could be divided into three counties and at the same time make all of the divisions counties of the first class. These lines have been so drawn that it makes it possible for one county seat to remain at Tombstone, another one to be established at Bisbee or Warren and a third at Douglas.

The section along the San Pedro river and the main line of the Southern Pacific would remain in the county with Tombstone as the county seat; the county lying about 10 miles east of Tombstone and including all of the upper end of the San Pedro river and Naco and as far north as the fourth standard south and within about 15 miles of Douglas would include the Warren county; the eastern part of the present county and as far north as the Chiricahua mountains would be in Douglas county, which would also include Courtland and Pearce and the Sulphur Spring valley.

This was the only plan known of to divide the county until within the last few days, when it became known that the citizens of Wilcox are again working for county division. It is the plan of the Wilcox people to have the county divided on a line running across the county from east to west and include all of the country north of township line 18 south. This line would divide the county about six miles south of Pearce clear across the county and would include all of the main line of the Southern Pacific railroad; the towns of Benson and St. David, Pearce, the West Well and the Chiricahua mountains all north of Wilcox, which would also include the Farago country.

What the Cochise members of the legislature will do when the question of division comes up is a question. It is known that several of them are opposed to any sort of county division or the removal of the county seat, while others are known to be in favor of amending the present law so that county seats can be removed by the holding of an election.

FLOOD CREST PASSES AND RIVER IS LOWER

Waters of the Rio Grande at this point are going down rapidly. A small flood crest passed here the first of this week. Reports from Elephant Butte show a marked drop there during the last few days.

The waters at this time are more affected by the conditions in Colorado than New Mexico, and the river is expected to remain normal until the spring freshets.

WILL BE SOLD ON BLOCK UNIT PLAN

Manhattan Heights to Be New Restricted Residence District.

Manhattan Heights is to be El Paso's newest restricted residence district. The new suburban addition is located in the tract surrounding the old four-story hotel in northeast El Paso. It is owned by the Manhattan Heights Realty company, a New York company of which Judge J. C. Desser, who is now in El Paso, is one of the principal owners.

The tract which is to be placed on the market adjoins Highland Park on the east and Altura Park on the south, as it is on the Highland Park car line. The property is to be disposed of by Judge Desser through H. E. Stevens in the form of blocks which must be improved and resold in keeping with the restricted district built. The entire tract includes 135 acres, but only the level part on the north and west end of the site will be offered for sale at this time. The remainder will be graded and sold after the original plan is disposed of by the New York company.

The initial sale will include one-third of the total amount of land in the tract and the tract will be sold by the Manhattan Heights Realty company. The balance of the land will be sold in individual lots, the block unit will be used and the sale made for cash instead of long term payments.

Judge Desser who is here to arrange for the disposition of the land, says that the plan has been found very successful in New York and believes it will make the northeastern section one of the most desirable in El Paso.
